Drought shrinks peach crop

CHRIS ZOELLER | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Sara Lipe, of Makanda Township, picks a peach from her family's orchard Tuesday in Makanda. Lipe said the drought has had a major impact on her peach farm. "The lack of rain makes the peaches sweeter, but the volume of peaches that we produce is a lot smaller," Lipe said. "They're just not as big as they should be." Lipe said she has lost 10 peach trees because of dry conditions. Rose Lipe, Sara's mother, said she couldn't remember a drought this bad since she has been picking peaches.

Towing companies face slow summer

AUSTIN FLYNN
Daily Egyptian

When students leave for the summer and Carbondale's population drops significantly, so does Carbondale tow companies' business.

The three towing companies in Carbondale — Larry's Towing, American Towing and Express Towing — all tow to keep the streets safe and clean. Vehicles can be towed for parking in a marked tow zone, if there has been an accident, if a vehicle can no longer run, if it is in front of a fire hydrant or if it is too close to a dumpster the night before garbage trucks collect.

Despite this, long-time tower Charlie Bonds said there are many misconceptions about a tower's job.

Bonds, owner of Larry's towing, said many people think tow companies can pick and choose where they retrieve cars from, but a contract must first be negotiated between the lot owner and the towing company. Once the contract is agreed upon and towing hours are set, only then can tow trucks operate in their specified areas.

"People think we can just tow any car just because we don't like the looks of it, but we have to have authorization to tow," Bonds said.

For example, Larry's Towing has a contact with Pinch Penny Pub, and American Towing has a contract with University Village. If a truck from Larry's tows from “Whenever us guys are out on the side of the road hooking up to a vehicle with our safety vests on, people need to automatically show us respect. We’re out doing a job, we don’t need to get run over by a vehicle. Personally, I’ve almost gotten hit twice.

— Jeffrey Cannon
Larry’s Towing employee

University Village, the company can be heavily fined and could even lose its license and be forced to shut down.

Mikki Pender, University Village's property manager, said the apartment complex started a contract with a tow company because the amount of residents is more than the amount of available parking spaces so, while not all of the tenants drive, parking spaces become scarce quickly.

“We have 502 parking spaces and we have 729 bedrooms,” Pender said. “We have a parking deficit here. That’s why we tow.”

University Village doesn't tow in June and July because many of their tenants go home for the summer, but they resume towing during the school year because their apartments fill up quickly. Like many other apartment complexes, University Village offers overnight guest parking permits for a fee.

Towing isn't just restricted to businesses, though.

When two cars collide and can no longer operate, the cars are considered to be on city property and whatever company has the contract with the city — which is bid upon yearly and currently held by Express Towing — will tow the car to their lot unless a car owner chooses otherwise.

The company must also clean any debris from the street that resulted from the accident.

TOWING

Jeff Cannon, a 16-year tower from Larry's Towing, said people need to show more caution to people being towed from the side of the road.

"Whenever us guys are out on the side of the road hooking up to a vehicle with our safety vests on, people need to automatically show us respect," Cannon said. "We're out doing a job, we don't need to get run over by a vehicle. Personally, I've almost gotten hit twice."

A recent amendment to the 'Move Over or Slow Down' law states that cars must show extreme caution with police cars, ambulances and fire trucks when they are stationary on the side of the road. Cannon said, as of September 2011, tow trucks fall into the category as well.

Fines of up to $200, plus court fees, will be enacted on any driver caught breaking this law.

Above all else, though, both Cannon and Bonds agreed on a matter of respect.

"If they would be nice to us and show us just a little respect we'll be nice to them, but if they're going to turn around and come in here and start yelling and cussing at us there's no way. I say 'if you have an attitude with me, you can go right back out that door,'" Cannon said.

Jenna Heidel, a graduate from Blackburn University, is someone who understood the respect sentiment when her car was towed last September.

"Well, they had my car. I didn't want to yell at them and be angry with them because I wanted my car back," Heidel said. "I'm sure people who experience this day to day would get a little frustrated, though."

As students return in August for the Fall semester, tow company owners say business will likely increase.

Ex-III. official tied to Blagojevich avoids prison

SOPHIA TAREEN
Associated Press

CHICAGO — A federal judge sentenced a former Illinois official to four years' probation Tuesday in a "pay-to-play" scheme in which he donated $50,000 to then-Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich's campaign in exchange for a state job.

Ali Ata, 60, showed little emotion as he spoke briefly in court. "I'm truly sorry for my actions," said Ata, the former director of the Illinois Finance Authority. "I accept responsibility."

Judge James Zagel, who also ordered Ata to pay $50,000 in fines and about $150,000 in restitution, cited Ata's cooperation with authorities for his decision to forego a prison sentence. The judge called Ata's cooperation honorable and useful.

Ata is one of the last figures to be sentenced in a decadelong legal saga that snared more than a dozen men, including Blagojevich.

He testified at Blagojevich's first corruption trial that ended mostly deadlocked two years ago. His testimony helped convict the impeached governor on one count of lying to the FBI about fundraising. Ata did not testify at Blagojevich's second, more streamlined trial, during which the former Democratic governor was convicted on additional counts.

Zagel, who sentenced Ata on Tuesday, is the same judge who sentenced Blagojevich to 14 years on 18 corruption counts. Blagojevich began serving his term in March.

Ata pleaded guilty to making false statements to a government agent and filing a false income tax return. Those convictions would normally carry a maximum eight-year sentence.

Ata testified in 2010 that he took a $25,000 check to a meeting in 2003 but didn't get his job with the authority — which provides public financing to businesses, nonprofit groups and local agencies — until after donating another $25,000 a year later.

After making the second $25,000 payment, Ata said he ran into Blagojevich at a fundraising event, where the then-governor said Ata would, in fact, be getting a state job and that "it had better be one where you can make some money."

Ata also testified at the earlier trial of Blagojevich fundraiser Tony Rezko, who was convicted in a $7 million kickback scheme.

Ata, a native of Jordan, testified at Rezko's trial that he came to the United States seeking an education and after graduation from college worked for a water treatment company for 25 years. He said after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, FBI agents came to his company to question him. Two weeks later, the company offered him an early retirement package and he took it.

The government has said it has nothing tying Ata to Sept. 11. Ata said early retirement was not what he wanted.

"It was devastating to myself and my family," Ata testified.

Low APR for men's ba

Coach Barry Hinson said fixing the academic issues of the past would be one of his top priorities when he took over the men's basketball team March 28.

Hinson got an idea of just how far down the team is academically when the NCAA's Annual Progress Rate came out and Saluki men's basketball only narrowly avoided penalties.

“The APR report that comes out ... will not be positive,” Hinson said. “At the same time, the things we’re doing right now are to remedy that. I hope that we have positive news come out later.”

The report is measured on a 1,000-point scale, and any NCAA team from any university that scores below 900 faces NCAA sanctions, including postseason bans and loss of scholarships. Saluki men's basketball scored 908 when the 2010-11 school year APR multi-year report was released June 20.

The NCAA releases two sets of numbers for each team: the single- and multi-year APR. The multi-year score is an average of the previous four single-year scores. It is also what the NCAA looks at in regards to penalties.

Hinson couldn't affect this year's report because it was based on school years when former coach Chris Lowery was at the helm. Despite single-year scores below 900 the last two years, scores were typically above average under Lowery with a perfect 1,000 in 2006-07. Hinson's scores while he was head coach at Missouri State were around the same.

Athletic Director Mario Moccia, who took over in 2006, said academics were strong when he came to SIU. The team had players such as Bryan Mullins and Jamaal Tatum, who received several academic honors during their time at the university.

“We had such a self-policing unit. We didn’t seem to have any of those (academic) troubles,” Moccia said. “Even the other students that might naturally struggle to get a (good) grade, they would attend classes so we didn’t have the issues that manifested themselves as years went on.”

Basketball could mean trouble ahead

Tony Young was a part of Lowery’s first few teams as a head coach, and he said Lowery was always serious about his athletes doing well in the classroom. Young said he and his teammates made each other accountable for their grades as well.

“We made sure that guys were doing what they were supposed to do because, at the end of the day, we needed each other to win games,” Young said. “If one guy was ineligible, he basically hurt our whole team.”

Moccia said, without specifically naming any current or former players, the recruits who were brought in didn’t have the same motivation to succeed in the classroom as they did on the court.

But the APR score only started to drop significantly when players began to transfer in large numbers. When players such as Kevin Dillard, Anthony Booker and Nick Evans left in 2010, followed by the departures of Gene Teague, Troy Long, Mykel Cleveland and Jordan Myers in 2011, they left SIU reeling because of how the NCAA punishes schools for not keeping their players.

Lowery was fired March 2 in part because of the amount of transfers the program saw in recent years. He was hired as an assistant coach on former SIU coach Bruce Weber’s staff at Kansas State April 5.

Two emails and a phone message left with Kansas State athletic personnel regarding Lowery’s availability for an interview were not returned.

The APR works by giving each scholarship athlete four points for the school year: one point for staying enrolled in school each semester and one point for remaining eligible each semester by maintaining at least a 2.0 grade point average. If a player leaves and enrolls at another school, SIU doesn’t get that point.

When players transfer out with a GPA below 2.6, they are considered ineligible and SIU loses one point. If they leave with below a 2.0, SIU gets both points taken away for that semester for that athlete.

Moccia said, without specifically naming anyone, a few players were let go when they were considered ineligible. He said the NCAA wasn’t clear on the punishments for a low APR until they met August 11, 2011, to redefine the penalties, which include loss of scholarships and postseason bans.

Media Services Director Tom Weber said the APR is fairly confusing, and many people think graduation rates have a major impact.

The NCAA measures graduation with the Graduation Success Rate (GSR), which gives athletes a six-year time frame to graduate with a diploma. According to Weber, the last four GSR numbers for men’s basketball are 82, 100, 91 and 86 on a scale of 100.

Weber said he only knows of four athletes who haven’t graduated, and two of them – Justin Bocot and Tony Freeman – are finishing their degrees this summer. Weber declined to comment on the two athletes who didn’t graduate. However, according to a source who wished to remain anonymous because of the subject matter, Carlton Fay left school after his final game in 2011 and didn’t finish the semester, which caused that year’s APR to take a hit.

When Treg Setty and Dantiel Daniels asked for releases from their scholarships after last season, Moccia and the Athletic Department denied those releases until their GPAs were above 2.6, Daniels eventually dropped the request for his release while Setty met the requirement, was granted a release and is now enrolled at the University of Ohio.

Since men’s basketball only has 13 scholarships, there is a larger effect on the team’s APR if one player loses eligibility rather than if a scholarship athlete lost eligibility while on the football or track team.

Next year’s single-year APR can’t reach a perfect 1,000 since senior guard Kendal Brown-Surles was academically ineligible for the first half of last season, but the team still has a chance to avoid penalties. However, since the single-year APR has been below 900 the past two years, the next two years’ scores need to be high so they average out and men’s basketball can avoid penalties.

SIU’s score wasn’t the lowest in the Missouri Valley Conference.

That distinction belongs to Missouri State, which had a multi-year score of 902. Since the APR system was instituted in 2003, only one Missouri Valley Conference men’s basketball team has ever had a scholarship reduction: Missouri State in 2008-09, the season following Hinson’s departure.

Aries — Today is a 6 — Your family provides comfort, but tempers could be short, so don't push it. It's definitely not a good time to gamble or buy toys. Get serious about reading.

Taurus — Today is a 7 — Complete assignments and make your next move regarding your education. Stay out of somebody else's argument. Trust your passions and create a game plan. Pay off a debt.

Gemini — Today is a 9 — A moment of confusion is only a test. If a real emergency were to happen, you'd know by instinct. Stay alert, but no need to spend yet.

Cancer — Today is a 9 — New opportunities to participate in public projects show up. Arm yourself with your best dose of self-confidence and go for it. Stay away from distractions, and you've got it.

Leo — Today is a 7 — Take care of a regular chore before you move on to more exciting stuff. Don't overextend. Begin a new phase in your studies. Guard against impulsive behavior, and avoid a confrontation.

Virgo — Today is a 7 — Recreate your relationships inside new possibilities. How would you like to celebrate your friendships? Don't spend too much for opinions, even from experts.

Libra — Today is a 7 — A change in your assignment could be for the better. Don't talk about it too much, but rather jump into action. Check and double-check the data, and ultimately trust your instinct.

Scorpio — Today is an 8 — Curbing expenses is a good idea (even if it was suggested by a partner). Don't sweat the small stuff. Circumstances provide what you need. Travel later.

Sagittarius — Today is a 7 — Another danger gets revealed. You don't have to dive right into it just yet. Preparation is key. Stack up provisions and get ready for battle. It could be easier tomorrow.

Capricorn — Today is an 8 — You may encounter new problems. Friends offer good advice. You get stronger from the experience, and your friendship grows. Stick to your budget, and don't touch savings.

Aquarius — Today is a 9 — Your work offers new opportunities. Make a list of what you have to do to achieve the next level. Outclass the competition. Resist the temptation to overspend.

Pisces — Today is a 7 — Your creative side comes in handy to manage a problem at work. Wait to see what develops, but don't bet the farm. Your partner helps with a social event. Stick to principles and the plan.
